The Columbian,

AN INDEPENDENT JOURNAL,

IS PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, IN Bloomsburg, Columbia County, Pa.

TEHMS.

Two Dollars a year, in advance. If not paid in advance, Two Dollars and Fifty Cents. Address all letters to

GEORGE H. MOORE, Editor of the Conumnan, Bloomsburg, Columbia County, Pa.

VOL. I.-NO. 7.

BLOOMSBURG, SATURDAY, JUNE 16, 1866.

PRICE FIVE CENTS.

betrayed neither excitement nor emo-

THE OLD VAGRANT.

WEARY and old, here let me die— Here, in this ditch--I care not how

'He's drunk!' the passing crowd now cry; I do not want their pity now; 'Tis so, save when, with shudd'ring glance And scarce a panse, their sons are thrown, Why stop to lose the play, the dance! Pass on! for I can die alone,

Yes, here to Time I yield at last, Since hunger can no longer kill, I once did hope, when youth was past, My age some shelter'd nook might fill; But in no Refuge was there room,

35 many wretches houseless roam! The streets through life have been my doom; So, after all, I die at home. When young, to those who carned their brend

"Teach me your trade," I used to say.
"We scarce find work ourselves," they said; "Go beg, my lad"-and turned away Ye rich, who bade me work, nor saw How hard I strove, ye gave, 'tis true, My crust of bread, my couch of straw I dare not lay my curse on you.

I might have robbed—I begged instead: The greatest theft I can recall Was but an apple o'er my head That overhung some garden wall, Yet want has such an evil look That into Jali I oft was thrown: The only wealth I had they took At least the sunshine was my own.

If we, indeed, mere vermin are, Twere wise to crash us ere we sting: If men, oh! teach us-wiser far-How from our lives some good may spring Worm that I am, had buman aid Or guldance reached me, even I Might here have labored, loved, and prayed, Where now I leave my curse, and die.

THE FRIENDS.

Forget thee! in the banquet halls, Go ask my fellow-men; Or ask the tear that secret falls, uch a shade of settled despair—that you honeyed flatteries, nothing loth. nized him, so altered was his counten- fell from him. ance and manner. He began a gay con-

of an intimate friend of mine, some lit- said he, with a faint smile; "I am "'Edward, said I, 'you are always tle distance out of town. We had a ball afraid," added he, "my dancing days boasting of your skill. I know but lit- settled life. I have no spirits to enjoy pasty, and beakers of wine; for though glass;" and she shook the oil so that make me happy!" exclaimed the agoin the evening, and I recollect were un- are over." He sighed. I rallied him the about the game, yet I lay you a wager anything. I feel an unwillingness to so many other ladies shared the honor wavy light fell on the mirror. "Blue nized monarch, falling on his knees, and commonly gay. I never was in better about such a bachelor declaration in a [14] beat you. spirits than in moving through a cotilion fine-looking young fellow to whom the "Edward smiled with conscious superal I take morbid satisfaction in resigning tions so refinedly pointed as to the often found together. Yet here I have breast.

secame uneasy while you contemplated An acquaintance was formed, and w It, and turned away as from an inspirer frequently met. Sometimes he was gay, eyes flashing fire, accused me of dealing him in his present state of mind. I took evidently disconcerted him, but he evaof painful thoughts. I felt the melan- and would give loose to his powers of unfairly. I was astonished, and replied out my watch; it was near ten. I plead- ded his chagrin in smiles. choly to be contagious, and began to wit and playful satire; sometimes he in what I thought a conciliating tone, ed that I had some papers to attend to "We come, charming cousin, to yellow flame flickered up, and cast a dull cis, love me as though I were a dear sishat and laugh with a group near me to was reserved, moody, sad. On all occa- But it was only adding fuel to the flame. before I went to bed, and rose to depart. breathe unalterable fidelity in thy car," halo around the chamber. She shook ter long since dead?" draw off my attention from that gloomy sions he was unequal and restless and He repeated his charges with vehement He took my hand. Brow and compressed and sunken lip; fitful in his mirth. His vivacity would rapidity, and my temper began to rise. but in vain. My eyes involuntary re- be crossed by that continually returning I told him he behaved like a child; that make up my mind to return home in said she, interrupting him, and draw- floor, before she combed it with the I will; and never till now knew Franturned, as under the influence of fasci- depth of gloom; and his laugh would be was heated with wine; and that in the next packet." nation; and even white I talked with subside into an indescribable expression | the morning, when he had slept off the some appearance of carnestness to the of internal suffering. There was a sad- effects of it, he would be ashamed of his ling influence of that none whom Francis ever loved never had more; for with scissors she away all drossiness," said she, moving lady who sat next to me, I could not ness that could not be removed; and present conduct. He rushed across the home, sweet home, and friends most shall be so beloved as Ellen," said he. clipped round and round till her head her hand over the chafing-dish. "Tis avoid giving a stealthy glance at the there was clearly remorse in it. I could table, almost overturning it, and aimed dear to the wounded heart. He sighed, "My Lord," said she, "I've heard of was negress bare, but not half so pie- with life as with this short episode of young stranger. There he sat as I first perceive this in his start; his secret a blow at my face. I received it on my and wrung my hand. remarked him-near a window, and shudder, almost imperceptible in his arm. The gentlemen present rose, and somewhat retired from the rest of the troubled eye; and the slight perspira- insisted on his leaving the room. He me often. Do not wait for the ceremo- of robbing my poor eyes of modesty, with oil, the sulphurle vapor arose in pain. To horse, Lord Francis, and company; his head resting on his hand, tion on his fine manly brow. The vul- did so, breathing threats and vengeance my of a return of visits. Between you their only clasping-scal. Toward me, poisonous influence as she leaned over whenever you pray, remember Ellen which he now and then passed through ture might be scared away for a moment, against me. As I expected, a challenge and me that ceremony may now, I I warn you, practise neither falsehood his rich, dark hair-from habit, as it but was sure to return with a keener was handed me that night; and I must were, for he was evidently in a revery, glance and a whetted beak. Still he confess that, feeling indignant at his befar from the present-scene and its hilari- was anxious to amuse, and would open havior, I received it without reluctance. ty. The bright eyes of beautiful wo- his portfolio of engravings, some of I arranged my papers, disposed of the gaged a passage to the East Indies, and throb for any living creature." men, sparkling with animation and which were very beautifully executed. little property I had, and wrote a letter joyous excitement, attracted him not. He would describe such of the scenes as to my parents. If the duel took place tive land. By this time I hope he is gray?" The soft, half wanton whisper, and the he had himself visited, and would now I considered that the chances were with his family, and happier than he londer tone of festal mirth, were equally and then forget his griefs over some against me; and I endeavored to prepare was when I took leave of him on board wert thou a withered crone from which were bereaved of all blush and beauty, unheeded. A lady was called upon to wild and beautiful landscape of Switzer- my mind for a fatal result. I had no the Achilles, bound for Canton. entertain the company with music. I land or Italy. He possessed a talent for experience with the pistol, having only was delighted to see her sit down to the drawing, and showed me a number of fired a few times in my life, at a mark, harp—the loveliest of instruments—it sketches he had made of our own scen- in sport. I requested a friend to act as shows off a fine voice and a fine arm so ery; two of which I recognized, as they my second, and appeared on the ground well. She commenced a sweet and were views of scenery in my native a little before the appointed time. Edplaintive air. It was an old-fashioned State with which I was familiar. One ward was not yet there. He shortly ar- after the disastrous battle of Pavia had ringlets to the winds. It may not be of the sulphur crystallized, became strain that I was fond of when a boy. of them was a romantic view on the rived, accompanied by a second. When consigned him to a year's captivity, my brow, for care shall soon furrow it acutely sensitive to the weight of a The deep swell of the music appeared to Hudson near Catskill, the mountains I beheld my old school-fellow—the whose last month had more gall than and blanch my cheek, which now seems string of pearls. One by one she removhave a powerful effect upon the young in the distance; the other, a lovely, friend of my youth-and considered the honey, through his marriage with the bloomingly. Care, too, shall more peak ed them from the smarting flesh; but stranger. He started from his revery, picturesque landscape near the Mohawk, purpose of our meeting, I felt a pang at Dowager Queen of Portugal, sister to my chin, and charms, if I have any, be the class behind had sunk so deep that roused himself, and seemed determined with an extensive prospect of the river my heart; and I believe the tears were his imperial and imperious captor most perishable." to make up for his former unsociability gracefully meandering through a fertile in my eyes when I went up to him. by striving to be agreeable. I never and varied country. He had a true feel- "'Edward,' said I, 'has it come to Rhone whispers had crept forth that he good sense than for thy beauty," said With inconceivable effort she preserved saw a more sudden change in an indi- ing for the beauties of nature, and it was this; must we fight, we, who have returned to France a crest-fallen man, he; and in stepping closer toward her herself from insensibility, and with covidual. I would searcely have recog- delightful to listen to the remarks that known each other so long, loved each who, after chaffing his proud spirit in his spur struck the door, which closed plous draughts of water allayed the versation with a smiling, rosy-lipped after our acquaintance had commenced, difference?" little girl he had not before condescend- we were sitting together in his room ed to notice; offered her his arm, and before a low fire. Candles had not yet unrelenting. they joined a group around the fair been called; and we sat for some time flow of heartfelt joy. Probably it ap- as it were. N- was in one of his ther.' ing it with the gloomy expression that inclined to disturb him. He turned ab- angry reply that rose to my lips, first caught my notice. His deportment ruptly; "S-," said he, "have you was hanging on his arm, nor to those you must," added he, in a mournful have given you." who joined her for a share of the hand- tone, "you must have remarked it; but some young gentleman's conversation. you want to spare my feelings. Alas! my friend to introduce me. He imme- medicine can minister to a mind diseas-English gentleman, who had just arrive his eye was filling. ed from a tour through our country.

"S-, you have no doubt wondered mind to fire at my old companion. Young men are soon acquainted, espes at the cause of my depression. Listen "'Damn it,' said Edward, with a sentiment and feeling; and it was not months since Edward G— and myself the man's afraid.'

Iong before we were engaged in an increased the Atlantic together." He "This was enough teresting conversation. His language stopped a moment. "We were schoolwas correct and polished, his address fellows-classmates-companions in the 'and you shall see.'

his observations displayed a knowledge gone, forever gone! Well, sir, Edward mechanically, raised my pistol-I am Never had Francis seen beauty so of the world, and on literary subjects a went into mercantile life, and I to the sure I took no aim-but my hand was rare, and so modest withal. She bore me when I say, yes? Yes, I shall meet refined elegance of taste. I was much studies of a profession. He was high-firm; I fired, and the next moment be- a massy salver, on which lay a bunch of your Majesty. See the revellers from pleased with him, for he was decidedly spirited and rather irascible, but a gen- held Edward spring from the ground, rusted keys, and with a downcast look the hall seek you as one lost. Join them, a superior man. When he grew ani- erous, noble-hearted fellow. Our affect quiver, and fall. The ball had entered she said, "My Lord will please to ac- and remember the appointed hour." mated on some subject that particularly tion was ardent, and I believe natural." his side. I went up to him. He had cept the keys of this brave old town," Francis retired abashed, when with interested him, and his eyes kindled, N--- paused, and then went on. "He just time to falter out: and his countenance shone with a tran- called on me one morning, and told me " 'I am dying; I have brought this such gracefulness that in amaze he the oratory; and Ellen quietly resumed sient enthusiasm, I thought him one of that he had an excellent offer to go to on myself. Charles-my dear Char the most captivating beings I had ever America as an agent for a very respect- make your escape.' beheld. But then there was that return able house, and if I would accompany of melancholy depression; and when him he would accept of it. I had fre- him till I was urged off. I saw his body "My name, my Lord, is Ellen, and tion, though from repeated efforts she he had been wrought up to an excite- quently expressed a desire of visiting conveyed to the next inn, when the this is my father, Peter Ingleverre," made to trim the chamber lamp, and ment on any favorite effusion of poetry America, and we both thought the op- seconds thought me riding off with said she. or romance, his countenance would settle portunity a good one. We hade adicu speed. I secreted myself to give one down into an expression of exhaustion to our relatives and friends, and set sail; last look at the remains of my friend. ed he. a repose of gloom, which seemed natural | we shared the same bed; we nursed But self-preservation impelled me, and "Sixteen last Candlemas," rejoined the paced round the apartment, which was she; "the worst is past," to it, and the necessary reaction of an each other; poor Ned was uncommonly I went away. I travelled through the little maid, who looked a perfect woman, small and meanly furnished, its only unusual excitement; then, by a painful sea-sick; we were as brothers." His country; I visited every place of note; so innocent and yet so heroic, as she ornament being a few pictures in em- to be the cause of all this wreck. O, Eleffort, he would endeavor to keep up his voice trembled, and there was a convul- I have been in every metropolis in the ventured to raise her head, that the broidery on Scripture subjects. In one len, canst thou forgive thy destroyer?" share of the spirit of the conversation, sive motion of the lip. "But I must United States; I have been in the best King forgot his disasters of war in sud- corner were suspended loose sheets of and beam forth with some brilliant stroke get over this." He drew his chair closer and gayest society; I have entered into denly inspired love; and while he in- vellum, parts of a missal for festival pur- than be a tarnished thing cast away, for of wit or lively sarcasm, and be mirth- toward the fire. "I will get on with scenes of high dissipation; I have made dulged in a pleasure he could ill conceal, poses, and in another seemed a perch to maids to loath and men to scorn me. ful for a moment; and I could perceive my story with more firmness-I am alone of every festive celebration of any between their hands the keys fell to the have been erected, upon which perched Now the worst they can say of me is, that he possessed a keen sense of the ri- most ashamed of myself, S ---. We ar- importance; but L never can forget my ground. This gave him a pretext to a hawk, but so in the shade that it was that I spoiled myself of a questionable diculous, and that at a time when his rived safely in Baltimore, the place of friend's last look; the impression will alight; and surrendering the bridle to a difficult to determine whether it was good to escape an evil." mind was freer and his heart calmer, he our destination, and like most other never wear off; in the festal hour, the courtier, he graciously received her fathmust have been a most entertaining young men in the heyday of life, min- figure of Edward G- bleeding, with er, and between him and her walked into bird. companion. I was convinced that there gled occasionally in scenes of dissipation. his countenance of agony, will rise be- town. was some hidden grief that lay like an Edward had often spoken of his skill in fore me. I hear his last words; I behold By this time the sun was on the wane, encompassed her knees between her upon a time, meeting a poor, plain girl incubus on his soul, and shut out all a difficult and somewhat antiquated him stiffening in death. He is with me and Peter, who was governor, besought hands, rocking to and fro as if engaged in an obscure town, was so blinded with enjoyment. I felt a powerful sympathy game of cards, and I thought with some when alone; he is with me in my his Majesty to sojourn for the night, and in unravelling some painful train of strange love that she saw no way to for him; a desire to alleviate his mel- thing of boasting and elation. I knew dreams; I fly to company and amuse- he would soon have fifty prime cooks to reflections. "If inward beauty can be restore him to sight than to lose her ancholy, not unmingled with a curiosity nothing of the game; but for the pur- ment, but he is with me there; he fol- prepare a royal feast. as to the cause. I kept near him the re- pose of tormenting him a little for his lows me with equal step; I cannot fly mainder of the evening; I exerted my- vanity, and from a love of mischief, I from myself, and his image is a part of desired than an invitation, consented; that the soul be defiled," said she, reself to appear cheerful; I endeavored resolved to apply myself secretly to it, my being-no-no-no-I never shall and he accompanied Ellen home to her viewing herself in the grotesque mirror say thou art blind?" to lead him into conversation on topics and obtained a pretty good insight into forget him." in which I thought he would feel an in- the game without his knowing any- He stopped and leaned his head on band of trained violars arrived to com- cleared into cheerfulness. "Now, vani- your hand, and I'll determine whether terest, and to prevent the mind from re- thing of the matter. One evening we the table. verting upon itself, and feeding on its were sitting together with some acquain- "Now," said he, "now can you won-Ar a lively pleasant party, toward the own dark thoughts; I tried to draw tances we had picked up, and to Edder at my deportment?" close of the Fall of 18-, I was introduc- him into the dance, but without effect. ward's surprise, I defled him to his fat- I was too much affected to reply. He with the pretty Miss T-; we both be- girls were waiting to be gracious; but I riority at my badinage, and produced myself with perfect inertness to the va- daughter of his venerable host. Per- them in Milesian perfection, albeit the trayed our ignorance of one part of the saw it gave pain, and ceased.

There is something very agreeshile at times in these mutual mistakes.

We stole off before the company broke the cards. We played—Edward was skilful. I exerted myself to the utmost, and cheeks mind cannot exert itself, even upon which she appeared unconscious; and able, at times, in these mutual mistakes. up, and as it was a beautiful moonlight and succeeded. Edward was surprised those subjects of which it was most fond, some of the envyers were surprised to are here, though they may not shame When we had sat down after the first night, with a fresh, bracing air, we and chagrined. I did not bear my vic- and with which it has been most famil- see her retire from the hall, observing, the rose, they never knew the blush of the light." cotilion, my wandering attention was agreed to walk home. He took my tory meekly; on the contrary, I openly iar. I am in a mental lethargy. My as she passed, that this was a feint to counterfeit. Teeth, likewise, which, arrested by a young gentleman whose arm, and I accompanied him to his exulted, and gave free scope to my ban- mind has lost its grasp. I read without draw the King more deeply in her coils. though passing white, any elephant- tle light that misled me into-9" entrance I had not observed. He was lodgings. Our conversation was on dif- tering humor. Edward demanded an- pleasure, I think without improvement. Ellen merely said she had arrange- hunter would at one glance discover apparently about twenty-seven years of ferent topics; the persons we had met; other game—he again lost. He became My nerves are unstrung, and I some ments to make for the morrow. age; his figure was thin, but fine; his the current news of the day; and there flushed, and drank several glasses of times think my memory fails-on all "And why not for to-night, cousin?" wooer than my Lord Francis told Ellen features were regular; his eye dark and expressive; and but for the gloom that expressive; and but for the gloom that ed to be absorbed in his own meditations.

Were long pauses; and each one appearance wine. He still persisted in the contest; subjects but one—one, stamped with income appearance wine. He still persisted in the contest; subjects but one—one, stamped with income appearance wine. He still persisted in the contest; subjects but one—one, stamped with income appearance with a sked the King, who, when the wine delible, with burning characters on my bowls had passed more than once, had rested on his pale countenace when I Once we engaged on the subject of cessful. I was too deeply occupied in heart and brain. I ought to return followed her from table, and discovered sweet strawberries. Well, and as I was why do you ask, Lord Francis?" first beheld him, I should have called youthful hopes and attachments; but as the game to observe his countenance; home, to my parents, to my profession. her reading in a little oratory alone. thinking, it's a pity all this toyshop him eminently handsome. But in that I perceived it occasioned some painful and in my merriment at an uncommon But as yet I cannot." gloom there was so much of mental suf- emotion on his part, I began to chat turn of good luck, I let out an unfortu- He ceased. I sat a few minutes; I reiterated he, sussively withdrawing look on as a sepulchre," ering, and so much of absolute wretch- about the beauty of the evening, and nate wittleism-it was the drop in the could not conceal my agitation. I was the book from her hand. She did not re- She called her maid, and bade her edness—such an absence of all hope, and the pretty lady who had listened to his full cup. Edward rose in a passion, grieved to see him thus, but knew that ply, while he tossed over the illuminated bring a chafing-dish, which done the blind!" and her tears fell plentously on dashed the cards from him, struck his the voice of consolation or any cold leaves, where pictured saints seemed to maid retired, and Ellen sat once more his upturned face, while he continued

One Winter evening, about a month 1s there no way of settling this unhappy

" Edward's countenace was fixed and

" ' Edward,' said I, ' you have grossly

"He interrupted me-

" 'Edward,' said I, 'you wrong me.

"This was enough. " Take your stand,' said I sternly, over the greater part of Europe, and his as boys can be. Oh! those days of our places, back to back; the word was beside whom stood his daughter, incommind was well stored with information; low and dishifterested kindness! Gone, given - Wheel and fire! I obeyed parably fair.

"He gasped, and died. I stood over inquired who she was,

continued:

engage in any active employment; and of his presence, to none were his atten- eyes and black hair are peculiarities not resting his head heavily against her

I whispered something of the sooththink, be well spared."

I bade him good-night, and departed. from thence he was to return to his na-

A LEGEND OF PROVENCE.

Charles the Fifth. From the Iser to the "Lady, we love thee more for thy ly severe. other so dearly; and for such a cause? bondage, had no means of breaking his with a spring. He rubbed his hands to- burning fever in her throat. Her voice In after life he was wont to say that chains, but by accepting a bride for gether, and expressed delight at an inciwhom he had small regard.

through Proyence, where his subjects a calm. harper. I observed him. It appeared in silence, gazing upon the fire, that to apologize for your unhandsome conto me that his gayety was unnatural, would kindle up into a bright flame, duct last evening, I may receive your gray old towns, he thought their giant true knight. His most Christian Maj- her way along the walls, for her eyes received knighthood as fearth's greatest unhealthy, forced. It was not the free and then subside, in playful wantonness, apology, and let the business go no far- gates looked down upon him with deripeared the more so to me from contrast- gloomiest reveries, and 1 did not feel "I felt provoked, but kept down the spurs to his steed, and leave his retinue he is an honored guest," observed she, corner rocked backward and forward, love without purity is dishonor, and was now elegant and graceful; and his not observed a strange inconsistency of insulted me, struck me; if you will ask his route, met him outside their walls, back. attentions were evidently by no means conduct about me?" I knew not what pardon for that outrage I will willingly and he could do no less than rein up, "Not for a diadem would we harm chamber rang. unacceptable to the lovely creature who to reply, and he sitated. "You must- apologize for any provocation I may and bow from his stirrups, which he thee, dearest," said he. "Yet by our The King, who had been walking in "The blow was deserved, sir, deserve This person had deeply interested me, it is not worth while." He passed his ed by your insolent sneering and mean throw him in lusty falls, was no more than forego thy love. Thou must be mustered sufficient strength to speak, boys; it induces a dangerous precocity; and when the music was over I desired hand over his brow. "Where is the conduct. I will not apologize for that.' deficient in grace than in strength. They ours;" and the caraptured monarch disdiately compiled; and the stranger was ed; pluck from the heart a rooted sor- You encroach too far-by Heaven! too with his presence, where, in festivity of braced her ere she could extricate herintroduced to me as Charles N--, an row?" His voice was tremulous, and far-the crushed worm will turn. And mimic fight, they might celebrate his self from his arms. yet I cannot-I cannot make up my enfranchisement from the prison in "Hist! heard you no noise?" breath-

Madrid. cially where there is a congeniality of to me. It is this day a year and six sneer, turning to his second, 'I believe his Majesty, "we have had such hard she; and she twined her small fingers the of their lustre remained. knocks on the battle-field that we are round her wrist. "In two hours hence none in love of the shadows of tourney." it shall be midnight. Meet me here suit, my father's welcome had been paid ticularly warn boys who want to be any-And he waved his hand by way of adieu, when the town clocks chime. Pray, my with wrong, and your Majesty's chive thing in the world to shun tobacco as a when his horse started at an old Castel- Liege, till then retire," said she, and alry been more eclipsed than my charms most baleful poison. It injures the easy and gentlemanty; he had travelled same sports—as fond and as intimate "The ground was measured; we took lan whose hair was silver white, and she opened the door.

and she held them toward him with gentle force he had been expelled from dark tresses with his mailed hand, and Tranquilly she arose, and her manne

Columbian.

"And your age, sweet damsel?" ask- ror, dull must one be who could not dis- hold, when she beckoned him back.

To this Francis, who nothing more jury, better the body know scath than father's house, where some time after a with a pensive expression which soon her conquest over her suitor became never! Nell must be lovely to have accomplete. And when placed by her complished that. La, what a toyshop of line his palm. "I lead a wretched, wandering, un-side at dinner, he forgot venison and charms are temptingly piled in yonder

"And why not to-night, fair Ellen?" should be in an hour or two as sad to have been thy base undoer." clenched hand upon the table, and with reasoning would only prove offensive to frown upon him chidingly. The silence alone. Suspending the basin of a spirit- to ejaculate, "And she is blind! O, who said he.

ing back.

"We swear by thy mild blue eyes brush it again. Redressing, her tresses holy books bursting their clasps when turesque, for it had no curls! "Farewell," said he, "come and see perjured mouths come nigh. Beware nor inconstancy.

"By our knighthood, we shall be ed eyeballs rolled in their sockets as if I saw him but twice afterward. He en- true to thee, girl, till our heart hath no they were driven inward by gusts of "Will you love me till my hair be became a dark olive hue, and assuming a charred blackness, the skin burst over "Enchantress! we shall love thee the quivering veins. Her cheeks soon hideousness itself might recoil," cried and her lips, if they had any similitude he so affectionately that she paused.

"And for what am I so vastly inesti- the sloe. She endeavored to allay the eis the First, vaulting into his saddle the shears, and farewell my pride in agony, for her neck, upon which drops of mind.

dent which created in her a considera- grief in such harshness and monotony and peace he had met only two human However this may have been, he rode ble trepidation, that soon subsided into that she started from her seat as the beings eminently great—one the fa-sion. He was wont to rally, and set his subjects, or betray confidence where which she shook. The perch in the lovely Ellen, who had taught him that far behind; but on one occasion the drawing a chair before her, and leaning as the hawk on it flapped its wings and charms without virtue is shame. townsmen, who had timely apprisal of in an easy posture over its tall carved screamed so loudly at the sounds of its courteously did, to the admiration of all sword we would sooner forfeit every the corridor, approached, bearing in good sharp thing, and a true one too, for who beheld him; for he who could acre of old Navarre, and leave Italy the one hand a small chamber lamp, and in boys who use tobacco. It has truly besought him to honor their tilt-yard engaged her from the bulwark, and em- was amiss, and he inquired the cause. | the bones; and it greatly injures the

ed she softly, and she held her finger to- were its prey. Alas! there was now no quantities of tobacco, is never known to "By our faith, good liegemen !" quoth | ward the door. He heard none, nor had occasion to cast down her eyes, for lit- make a man of much energy, and gen-

> " Dost mock us, Ellen? Say will thou has preserved your honor." keep thy promise one Square, one or three insertions Four " Half column me column 15 0 Executor's and Administrator's Notices Auditor's Notices....

Terms of Advertising.

Editorial Notices twenty cents per line.

Other advertisements inserted according to spe-

"Assuredly my Lord does not doubt what hast thou done?" exclaimed he, casting down the lamp and sword, and covering his face with his hands. "Why didst thou not intimate thy heroic resolve, and the possession of worlds would not have made us ruin that loveliness which kingdoms cannot repair." "You would have called it maid-sick martyrdom, or coquetry run mad, or epithets equally fantastical," said she, pressing her hand to her bosom. "Stay, there yet is hope. The injury thou hast inflicted is not irreparable," furtive glances she cast often at a mir- cried he, rushing to arouse the housetinguish that she was ill at ease. She "I pray your Majesty be calm," said

"O heavens, how heartless! we seem

"Indeed I can; far better be thus

"And what will they say of me, El-

"That the good King Francis once At length she sat on a low stool and nowise retained except by outward in- own." "Gracious and all mysterious God!" exclaimed he, appalled, "thou dost not

"In sooth, such is my fear. Give me memorate with songs the happy visit. | ty aside," continued she," Nell, did you | there is water in the well-spring of the Ellen entertained the King with art- ever think you were so pretty as to brain," said she, with touching tenderless talk so interspersed with sense that make conquest of a king? Never, Nell, ness; and she shed a tear, which he kissed away as she endeavored to exam-

" Ellen, Ellen, say thou canst see, and

"All's dark, my Liege."

"All, Ellen?"

"Yes, my Liege."

"O, say not so. Say there's yet a lit-

"And so there is, Lord Francis; a lit-

"Love, Ellen."

"Tis so, Lord Francis." were no ivory; and lips which a truer "For whom, Ellen? Thou tremblest. I know all."

"Then if you do, why do you ask?

"Ellen, thou lovest him who would

"Tis so, my Lord."

"O, torture worst of all; and Ellen's sulphur, and as it fused into liquid, a "Won't you, my sweet Lord Fran-out her hair from the golden pins that "Dearest sister, I will," said he, kiss-

"Farewell," said he, "if I can, I will "What's a charmed portal, my Lord?" bound it, and it fell luxuriantly to the ling her hands fervently. "Sister Ellen, greatest care, as if she intended to re- eis love so pure, so lasting."

"Eh! yon keen crucible hath burned an hour. Nothing in the way of vir-Smearing her forehead and cheeks tue was ever accomplished without the fatal dish. Her eyelashes were the Ingleverre,' first sacrifices to the fume; and her pain-

"And must we part thus, more dearly loved and doubly fair ?"

" Yes, and rejoice that no guilty blush fire. The fairness of her forehead at first crimson my cheek, nor criminal throb upbraid my heart for beating," replied she, as the hawk uttered such a piercing series of screams that first her attendant, and then others, and finally retainers and revellers, rushed into or of fruit, partook less of the rowan than surrounded the room, where they discovered the sovereign surnamed "The mable?" said she hesitatingly. "It pain by averting her head from the va- Restorer of Learning, and the Great," "I AM yet a king!" exclaimed Fran-cannot be my tresses-a few clips of por; but the evasion only increased her deprived of forethought and firmness

The most skilful leeches the town or court could afford were summoned; but their aid was only of partial avail. Facial beauty had forever bade farewell to her whose self-control was worthy the best days of chivalry. Eyebrightness had not, however, departed; and in the

its withdrawal gave her torture intense-favorite emblems of chase that the clock struck twelve. As peal after peal mous Bayard, the poor captain of a few " 'Sir,' said he, coldly, 'if you choose received him with every demonstration "I was childish enough to be alarms swept dismally along she tottered to the lances, the chevalier sans reproach, from

BOYS USING TOBACCO.

A STRONG and sensible writer says a "I will tell my Lord most willingly," brain, the spinal marrow, and the whole said she, and the screaming hawk nervousfluid. A boy who smokes early pounced at divers shadows as if they and frequently, or in any way uses large erally lacks muscular and physical as "My Lord, had I hearkened to your well as mental power. We would parcould brighten. Happily a brief pain teeth. It produces an unhealthy state of the throat and lungs, burts the stom-"O infatuated, yet noble-minded girl, ach, and blasts the brain and nerve.